Vehicle Crashes Through Detour Barricades Into Pocono Creek

BARTONSVILLE—A 25-year-old Dunmore truck driver was killed instantly yesterday when his tractor-trailer crashed through two barricades and plunged 25 feet into Pocono Creek.

Dr. Charles C. Rushmore, Monroe County coroner, said John T. McAllister died as the result of extensive internal injuries. He suffered a crushed chest, a broken right leg, and cuts of the thigh, face and head.

Stroudsburg State Police, who investigated the mishap, were unable to determine the cause.

McAllister, whose wife reportedly is an expectant mother, was traveling north on Route 611 at 1:40 a.m.

A motorist told State Police that McAllister's empty coal truck passed his car as both vehicles approached the intersection of Routes 12 and 611 at Bartonsville.

The truck crashed into a barricade, which directs northbound traffic to turn right into a detour to Tannersville, then continued north for another 200 yards, and struck another barricade before plunging into the creek.

Troopers said the driver was partially thrown from the cab. The twisted wreckage ended up in about a foot of water between the newly constructed abutment and the center pier of the washed out bridge.

Troopers were notified by the motorist whose car was passed by the tractor-trailer a few seconds before the tragedy occurred.

The truck was removed from the creek by Joe Bush's Garage at Bartonsville. Damage was estimated at $5,000. McAllister's body was taken to Dunmore yesterday afternoon by the Lanterman Funeral Home.

The victim was born in Dunmore, the son of William McAllister and the late Mrs. Garnet Reilly McAllister. He was a graduate of Dunmore High School and a member of St. Mary of Mount Carmel Roman Catholic Church, Dunmore.

McAllister served as a corporal in the US Army between 1932 and 1934.

Survivors are his wife, the former Marion Hicks; his father; two sisters, Eileen, Dunmore, and Mrs. Carl Buck, Dunmore, and a brother, Robert, Ford, N. J.

A number of accidents, including one in which another truck driver was killed, have occurred at the Tannersville end of the detour, since it went into operation after the flood.

Light Snow Mixes With Area's Sub-Zero Marks

New York Temperature Sets Record

By The Associated Press

THE sharpest cold this side of Siberia froze mercury thermometers in central New York State Tuesday and shattered records in the Northeast.

The temperatures — recorded on alcohol thermometers — dropped to -55 in Boonville, in central New York, an all-time low for the state.

This was 91 degrees colder than in Galena, Alaska, where southerly winds have created a comparative heat wave. Galena, in the western Interior, had a low of 36 above.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Chicago said the update New York reading was the lowest in the entire Northern Hemisphere, except for portions of Siberia.

Local weather records tell by the hundreds as the arctic blizzard went through its second day in the Northeast with no relief in sight.

A -30 reading at Burlington, Vt., and -16 at Rochester, N.Y., were the lowest January readings ever recorded in those cities. The -20 at Albany, N.Y., was the coldest for the date on record.

Wide Area

Sub-zero readings were spread across the Northeast states westward to Montana. Temperatures remained below the zero mark throughout the day from interior New York State into New England.

More than 5,000 northern New York families, most in Oswego and Watertown, were left without heat in their homes for several hours with temperatures around 30 below zero. The gas supply to points north of Syracuse was cut off when a valve cracked in an underground pipeline.

Schools were closed in several New York cities and towns. The coldest reading reported was an unofficial -57 at Owls Head in New York's Adirondacks.

The polar air, which covered much of the eastern half of the nation, spilled westward over the Continental Divide and into the Northwest. The cold push was accompanied by snow and sleet.

There were some light rain showers extending southward to the San Francisco area.

Mountain passes north of Leadville, Colo., two miles high in the Colorado Rockies, were buried under 8 to 24 inches of new snow.

Another band of snow stretched from the mid-Mississippi Valley eastward over parts of the Great Lakes and into the Ohio Valley.

A treacherous mixture of sleet and freezing rain spread over the Carolinas and adjacent sections of Georgia, prompting special warnings on highway hazards. A belt of snow extended northeast through the Midatlantic states.

Ike Outlines Relief Plan

WICHITA, Kan., Jan. 15 (AP)—President Eisenhower today outlined administration plans for a 76-million-dollar program of supplemental emergency relief for drought-plagued farmers and ranchers.

On the longer-range aspect of the problem, the President called for a reappraisal of credit policies—both government and private—to determine whether more liberal loans can be extended to those who have been hard hit by one of the worst droughts in history.

Eisenhower announced, too, that Western railroads have agreed to extend another program designed to provide relief. The railroad's 50 per cent reduction in freight rates for hay shipments was scheduled to have expired today.

Continued
The cut will be continued through March 31, the President said.

All of these relief steps—with the emergency 76-million-dollar program subject to congressional approval—were set forth by the President as he concluded a two-day tour of the Southwestern drought area. He saw conditions at first hand in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Kansas.

He came to Wichita to receive the reports and recommendations of representatives from all of 15 Great Plains states suffering from drought and wind erosion. The chief executive's own program was outlined to that group of about 700.

His short-range emergency plan, on which Eisenhower said he will seek swift congressional approval, calls for:

1. Authority to use 25 million dollars from the federal disaster loan revolving fund to provide additional emergency livestock feed assistance to drought-stricken farmers and ranchers.

2. An extension until June 30, 1958, providing for use of 25 million dollars in unobligated funds appropriated for agricultural conservation. Eisenhower said that would enable the Agriculture Department to make payments to farmers and ranchers to carry out wind-erosion and other emergency conservation measures.

3. An additional appropriation of 26 million dollars under the Bankhead-Jones Tenant Act to provide primarily for refinancing farm indebtedness by direct loans.

This three-point emergency program appeared to be essentially in line with a good many of the demands Eisenhower heard throughout the Southwest. Several delegations urged more liberal loan and credit policies.

Departing from his text at today's conference, the President said he agrees there is "need for good credit, cheap credit."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 (AP)—A sizzling argument between the Army and the National Guard Assn. about active duty time for new Guardsmen will be explored in Congress in about three weeks.

The House Armed Services Committee today set subcommittee hearings on all reserve programs, tentatively to begin Feb. 4.

Subcommittee Chairman Brooks (D-La.) told newsmen "I feel sure the Guard will want to be heard" about the new requirement, announced at the Pentagon yesterday.

The National Guard Assn. had suggested a three months' training period and said the six months order would mean a 100,000 reduction in the Guard.

Brooks said he has not made up his own mind on the issue, but "generally I favor raising the standards of the reserve components, and that means providing enough training time to train men to be quickly effective in case of emergency."

The full committee today decided the Brooks subcommittee hearings will begin after a series of briefings of all committee members by the secretaries of defense and the three military services and members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. These closed briefings will begin Jan. 28 and are expected to require a week.

Several members asked for assurances that the new National Guard policy would not actually go into effect before subcommittee hearings begin, Brooks said he saw no chance this would happen.

The National Guard angle is the most controversial part of the revised program, which would automatically reduce the military service obligation of all except career soldiers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 (AP)—President Eisenhower returned tonight from a two-day tour of the Southwest drought area. He landed at National Airport at 9:36 p.m. in the heaviest snowfall of the winter, which blanketed the capital city.

Opposition
The Soviet Union has opposed most control proposals on grounds they would infringe on national sovereignty.

The U.S. clarifications came as Britain announced support for a new U.S. proposal to bring space missiles under international control. The U.S. plan was contained in a five-point proposal presented to the U.N. yesterday.

16 Below Reported At Tobyhanna

LIGHT snow spread steadily across Monroe County and much of Pennsylvania last night as temperatures again headed toward zero.

At 10:30 p.m., the mercury registered five above in Stroudsburg, and three above at Mount Pocono.

But during the early morning hours, the thermometer tumbled to 16 below at Tobyhanna, 13 below at Mount Pocono, and to 11.3 below in Stroudsburg.

Meanwhile, Joseph Ciampi, Monroe County highway superintendent, reported that every available piece of equipment and all personnel went to work shortly after the snow began falling last night.

Ciampi said 30 trucks and 75 men were at work cinder the county's main highways. At 9 p.m., close to an inch of snow had fallen, making driving treacherous in many areas.

Mount Pocono Weather Observer Harry E. Greene reported a 13 below reading at 7 a.m. The high was four above. Meanwhile, in Stroudsburg, Weather Observer William Hagerty disclosed that the mercury tumbled to a low of 11.3 below zero at 4 a.m., while the high of six above was reached at 11 a.m.

Pointing out that a slight breeze kept the thermometer from going any lower, Hagerty noted that the record low for January in Stroudsburg is about 25 below zero.

Snow was heaviest in central and northeastern Pennsylvania from a low pressure trough moving from the south. An accumulation of 24 inches was predicted by early today in these sections. Skies were expected to clear during the day.

The fresh snow followed clear weather and sub-zero temperatures yesterday. The Weather Bureau in Harrisburg reported an unofficial low of 25 below at Cedar Run in Lycoming County. The official low temperature for the state was 19 at Towanda.

The bureau said, however, that temperatures were "making a slow return to not so cold levels." Its reports from across the state indicated except Blairsville, which reported cloudy weather early Tuesday night.

Temperatures across the state last night included Allentown 5, Harrisburg 13, Sellersville 11, Williamsport 10, Phillipsburg 6, Altoona 11, Johnstown 10, Brookville 12, Pittsburgh 18, Blairsville 13, Erie 13, Scranton 8, Philadelphia 15, Middletown 13, Mt. Pocono 6.

Hangers, Planes Burn
McCHORD AIR FORCE BASE, Wash., Jan. 15 (AP)—Two huge hangers, four planes and large quantities of equipment were destroyed by fire at this key western Washington Air Force base today. The loss will run into several million dollars.

An Air Force spokesman said the hanger losses would create maintenance problems for jet interceptors but normal defense activities for the Pacific Northwest would not be affected.

Arthur J. McCarthy, 53, chief of the McChord fire department, collapsed from exhaustion and inhalation of smoke and was hospitalized for observation and a possible back injury.

Egyptians Swarm Into El 'Arish

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector, Jan. 15 (AP)—Israeli troops quit the Sinai bastion of El 'Arish today and joyous Egyptian citizens swarmed over U. N. troops as they took over. The emotional scene was described here tonight by an American eye-witness.

So many shouting Egyptians were romping around the city that Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, the U. N. commander, had trouble finding a spot to land his helicopter.

Yugoslav troops of the U. N. force were ordered to speed up their advance into El 'Arish, most important base of Egypt's Sinai Peninsula, to keep the crowds in hand.

Maj. Donald Gordon, Canadian liaison officer directing the Yugoslav advance, was caught in the crowd. His car was dented and the radio aerial was broken.

Account
Gordon was forced to drive to the southern outskirts to give his orders to the Yugoslavs, the American said. He gave this account:

Early this morning Arab notables lined up in El 'Arish's main street, otherwise deserted because of the Israeli army curfew.

The Arabs thanked the Israelis for the kindness they said they experienced under the Israeli occupation.

As the Israelis withdrew, thousands of people rushed out of their homes, shouting happily and raising pictures of Egypt's President Nasser.

Some in the crowd hoisted green and white Egyptian flags. Others burned an effigy of Premier David Ben-Gurion of Israel.

Eddie Cantor Leaves Hospital
HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15 (AP)—Comedian Eddie Cantor left Cedars of Lebanon Hospital today, reported by his physician to be "completely recovered" from exhaustion.

Cantor, 65, entered the hospital Saturday night after he collapsed following an hour-long television appearance celebrating his birthday.

Israeli Sets Date For Troop Withdrawal From Peninsula

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Jan. 15 (AP)—An Israeli delegation spokesman announced tonight that Israeli troops will pull out of the Egyptian Sinai Peninsula by Jan. 22 except for one point commanding the Gulf of Aqaba.

'Mad Bomber' Blames Injury For Actions

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP)—A letter writer who claims he is the mad bomber says his grudge against humanity stems from an uncompensated job injury that left him totally disabled. He claims it doomed him to a life of misery, suffering and abuse.

"I did not receive any aid of any kind . . . I blocked my every effort . . . I decided on bombs," he wrote.

The bomber is credited by New York City police with setting more than 30 homemade pipe bombs in public places in the past 16 years. Several have exploded, injuring people but not causing any deaths.

"I will extend this one-sided truce," the man wrote in reference to his passing offer of a truce on bomb planting in his original letter of Dec. 27.

Latest
In his latest missive, he said: "I was injured on job at a Consolidated Edison plant. As a result I am adjudged totally (sic) permanently disabled. I did not receive any aid of any kind from company that I did not pay for myself while fighting for my life. I insisted on hearings. My case was marked closed four times. They blocked my every effort . . . My medical bills and care have cost thousands. I did not get a single penny for a lifetime of misery and suffering — just abuse. When a motorist injures a dog he must report it. Not so with an injured workman. He rates less than a dog. I tried to get my story to the press. I tried hundreds of others. I typed tens of thousands of what you call 'our American system of justice' at first hand as you can see. I do not want more of it if I can help it. I determined to make these dastardly acts known. I have had plenty of time to think. I decided on bombs."

Red Pleads Guilty
NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP)—Communist leader Irving Potash pleaded guilty today to ending his self-exile from the United States by sneaking back in illegally. The 54-year-old Red faces up to two years in prison and a $1,000 fine when he is sentenced in federal court Friday.

He added that Eban told the secretary general Israel is willing to discuss the question of removing troops from Sharm el Sheikh, commanding the Gulf of Aqaba and the Straits of Tiran, which lead to the southern Sinai port and Israeli naval base of Elat.

Diplomatic sources said the powerful 27-nation African-Asian bloc, which includes all the Arab countries, have agreed they should propose condemnation of Israel in the Assembly and urge all countries to refrain from military, financial or economic help for Israel until her forces clear out of Egypt.

Nasser Closes Door To West
CAIRO, Jan. 15 (AP)—Egypt's President Nasser today closed a door to Western commercial penetration of Egypt by the device of "Egyptianizing" foreign banks and insurance companies.

His minister of finance, Abdel Monem Kaissuny, announced drastic legislation that stopped just short of nationalization.

Blakley Named To Take Over For Daniel

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 15 (AP)—William A. Blakley, 58, an Eisenhower Democrat, today was named temporary United States senator from Texas. He succeeds Price Daniel, who was inaugurated today as governor.

Democrats say they expect him to vote with them when he moves start to reorganize the Senate.

But Blakley would not commit himself. He has crossed a great many political lines in Texas.

The Dallas millionaire's Senate vote could be crucial. Not counting him, the Senate today had 48 Democrats and 47 Republicans.

Should he vote with the Republicans, a 48-48 deadlock would occur and Vice President Nixon would be expected to break the tie in favor of the GOP. That would mean general reshuffling of Senate committees with Republicans stepping into chairmanships.

Attempt
Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) says he will attempt reorganization any time the GOP can muster 48 votes.

That could occur within 90 days. Under Texas law, a special election to name a senator to complete the term of Price Daniel must be held within 60 to 90 days.

A lone Republican, Thad Hutcheson, is running against a large field of Democratic candidates.

Democrats fear their votes will be split so much that Hutcheson will win. Under present law, no runoff of the two top men can be held.

Gov. Allan Shivers, who appointed Blakley, said the new senator would not be a candidate in the special election.

Children's Aid Names Committee

A COMMITTEE to study the advantages and problems which would arise from adding protective counseling to the services of the Children's Aid Society of Monroe County was named at the meeting yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Donald Gilpin, president.

At the present time the authority of the Children's Aid Society here is limited to supervision of the care of children who must live outside of their own homes, either because of court commitments or at the request of their own families. Children living in their own homes and their families, however, could often use a counseling service when problems arise.

Requests

In the report of the executive director, Mrs. Jean Abbott, several such requests were noted during the past month. The society already provides counseling wherever possible, but such services need to be defined, it was pointed out.

Mrs. Gilpin named to the study committee Duffell Hansen, Mrs. Frederick Jones, Leonard Randolph, Mrs. Horace Butler, John Lesoine and Miss Elizabeth Martin. They will consult with nearby Children's Aid Societies who have combined foster home care and family counseling on how it was set up in their counties and how it is working out.

At the meeting, held at the Penn-Stroud Hotel, Lesoine was welcomed as a new board member. Reports on conferences regarding the new state reimbursement program to the counties were given. Members were urged to attend the meeting of the Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania to be held Jan. 25 in Philadelphia.

It takes a complicated and costly network of telephone facilities to make it simple and inexpensive for you to

Call Across the Land

You probably don't think twice about it, but with a few measured flicks of your forefinger on a telephone dial you can put a multi-billion-dollar maze of equipment into operation. Seconds after you do, your voice goes hurtling through wires, through hundreds or thousands of electrical devices, until it reaches another telephone. That telephone may be across the street or across the nation. It could be any one of 60 million telephones linked together in the United States today.

This modern miracle requires a tremendously complex network of telephone circuits. Just picture a map of the United States, with every highway, country road, city street, and private driveway marked on it—and you'll have some idea of how complex it is.

Thousands of telephone central offices—housing intricate switching equipment—are needed all over the country to relay your call quickly and accurately. Highly skilled engineers and technicians are called upon to keep this equipment operating smoothly around the clock, under normal or abnormal conditions.

And there are abnormal conditions. Perhaps the place you're calling is shrouded in a dense fog or is buried in a record snowfall. A flood or hurricane or 4-alarm fire may be raging there. Under such circumstances, Long Distance lines may soon become overcrowded.

Here's where the flexibility of the system comes into play. Additional circuits are needed. They're acquired by shifting and rearranging present circuits both at the toll centers and in the local central offices. Calls normally relayed through the area to other points can be diverted and rerouted by way of other cities. The great toll switching machines throughout the country will also automatically reroute calls. And—if the problem arises on a weekend or a holiday—still other circuits can be temporarily leased back from large industries which have national networks of private lines between their offices and plants.

Major family holidays—like Christmas, Mother's Day or Thanksgiving—are more "predictable" than fog, snow or disasters, but still require carefully planned adjustments in circuit facilities. Since so many holiday calls go to small towns and villages throughout the country, the number of circuits normally serving them must be increased. Traffic records for previous holidays help Telephone Company officials determine which areas will be affected, so that delayed holiday calls can be kept to an absolute minimum.

You may wonder why more circuits can't be supplied everywhere—permanently—to handle these abnormal calling loads. They could be. But it would be prohibitively expensive—and impractical, since they would be needed so seldom. With our present flexible circuit system, we can put your call through without delay 99 times out of 100—and at the most reasonable rates in the world.

WE THINK JOAN'S THE RIGHT TYPE—to be Miss Scranton Press Photographer in the current competition. She's one of the girls from this area now entered in the contest. Here, confronted with a camera and a typewriter, Joan Pleyer, 20, of Stroudsburg RD 2, turns (naturally) to smile at Les Carlton (lucky man) who is local co-chairman. Joan is a 1954 graduate of Stroudsburg High's commercial course; is now employed as a secretary at Patterson-Kelley (they're lucky, too). She likes photography, makes hobbies of taking snapshots, collecting records (all types, from rock 'n roll to Rimsky-Korsakov). Miss Pleyer goes to Scranton tonight for rehearsal of contest pageant.

Don't buy a "Deal." Going back for service and extra stops at gas stations soon offsets the apparent advantages.

Buy the automobile you want. If you want Command Performance in a car, "step on" a Studebaker or Packard and feel that supercharger go to work for you at any speed.

Enjoy Twin Traction with drive at both rear wheels on ice, in snow or mud.

Enjoy command stops with Studebaker-Packard's air-cooled brakes.

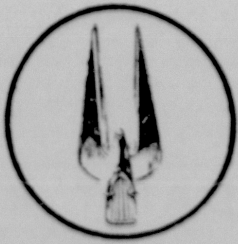

Enjoy the prestige of the car that is different.

Sheridan Cragun of Yakima, Washington, wanted sports car performance plus low gas consumption. He also wanted a car his family would enjoy. He got everything he wanted in a Studebaker. Here's the proof:

"A gas-slingy Studebaker Hawk, piloted by its proud owner, Sheridan Cragun of Yakima, Washington, topped all other cars competing in the Yakima Valley Sports Car Club Economy Run. The Hawk, equipped with Flightomatic, earned its victory by attaining a phenomenal 52.8 ton-miles per gallon (25.9 actual miles per gallon).

"Included in the Run were practically all makes of foreign sports cars.

"Competing cars began the test at Yakima and drove through Vantage, Wenatchee, Cle Elum via Blewett Pass and back again to Yakima. Cragun was accompanied on the Run by his wife and two children."

Gasoline Inventories Rising Fast But Refineries Increasing Prices

The motoring public, and that includes almost everybody these days, is finding it difficult to reconcile two recent announcements.

One came from oil industry spokesmen who said the price of virtually all petroleum products in rising about a cent a gallon, due principally to an increase in the price of crude oil.

The other disclosure was in a news dispatch which reported gasoline inventories are building up to burdensome levels. The American Petroleum Institute said gasoline stocks now exceed 186 million barrels, 17 million barrels above a year ago, and are still rising.

By Spring, according to the Wall Street Journal, gasoline inventories almost certainly will surpass the record 198 million barrels in storage on March 30, 1956.

Home heating oil stocks also rose 30 million barrels above a year ago and now stand at 164 million barrels.

Industry sources attributed a 35-cents-a-barrel boost in crude oil prices to the effects of the Suez crisis and a resulting shortage of petroleum products in Europe. However, hopes that oil-short European countries might help siphon off some of the U.S. gasoline excess seem to be fading.

Refiners say that of all the petroleum products—gasoline, kerosene, heating oils and heavy industrial fuel—the one that Europeans want least is gasoline. The demand for other oil products remains high, however, and is reflected in higher prices here and elsewhere.

But failure of Europeans to drain off any large percentage of stepped-up gasoline production of American refineries has resulted in rising inventories in the face of increased demands in this country.

Assuming that the law of supply and demand should apply to gasoline as it does to other petroleum products, motorists have a right to know why gasoline prices are not dropping at a time when record stocks are being built up. Perhaps the oil interests have the answer. We're not so sure ourselves.

President Receiving On-The-Spot View Of Tremendous Loss Caused By Drought

President Eisenhower is making a first-hand inspection of record drought damage during a three-day, 4,500-mile survey of six states in the Southwest and Midwest.

He and other federal officials, including Agriculture Secretary Benson and Interior Secretary Seaton, are getting an eyeful of the multi-billion-dollar losses farmers have suffered because of many months without rainfall.

Thousands of acres of fertile land have been laid waste, misery has mounted fast for both man and animal, and thousands of farmers face financial ruin unless further government funds are made available.

The Eisenhower party conferred with farm groups and listened to their proposals on how the federal government could provide additional relief. The President also received formal recommendations from government and other experts on what should be done.

Mr. Eisenhower withheld immediate comment on both emergency and long-range relief suggestions, but promised to do his best to ease the hardship, which in some areas stretches back seven years.

He is expected to submit his formal recommendations to Congress at an early date. Something must be done at once to bring relief to the sun-scorched region, and then a plan for the future will have to be adopted.

Less-wasteful crop practices, incorporating greater use of the soil bank plan and other conservation measures, should be given high priority in any long-range drought-relief program. There should be no great outlay of public funds unless preventive steps are taken at the same time. Permanent relief should be the goal and the sooner corrective steps are taken the cheaper the objective can be accomplished.

George Sokolsky Says... Journalism Is Good Profession For Living But Not For Those Who Wait For Death

A young lady, Donna, from Detroit writes me as follows:

"Dear George Sokolsky:

"Our class is studying different kinds of careers. I'm very interested in newspaper work. I was wondering if you could give me an idea of what it is like to prepare for it. What are some of the disadvantages and how does your pension work...?"

I do not know how my pension works because I do not have any. If I worked for a pension, I would get a job that requires no initiative, no ingenuity, no risk. Journalism in any form is a bad profession for those whose ambition it is to work about 20 years, get a pension, and then wonder what to do with themselves. It is a good profession for the living, not for those who wait for death.

Most of those who go in for newspaper work know that they are moving into a profession that does not bring enormous financial rewards. As a matter of fact, because the Canadians push the price of newsprint beyond all reason, some newspapers go out of existence or amalgamate with others or cut their costs.

Or there were those magazines like "American," "Woman's Home Companion," "Collier's" which were shut down altogether. That is a hazard of the profession.

Very few newspapers have pension systems and most young men or women who go into this work have a romantic yearning for this particular form of self-expression, just as composers or playwrights starve for years until they attain recognition, if ever.

I think, Donna, that you had better make up your mind whether you are interested in newspaper work or in a pension. If it is a pension that you seek, then the Civil Service is the best place to go. On a government job, one can get along well doing a minimum of work, never getting in anybody's way, offending no superior, keeping one's nose clean, as the phrase is, and if one does not die before the time for retirement comes, then there is the pension to take care of a tiresome old age.

In my profession, most men and women work until they die which is as it should be. Sometimes it is a little more skillful and imaginative and he lands a better position than the next fellow. Or one, by very hard work, becomes a specialist in a particular field. Such men and women work around the clock, read voluminously, travel the world, and know their subject. This is particularly true of the various science reporters, as an example.

Many reporters nowadays must know several foreign languages if they are to get on with their jobs. They are expected to know how to get on in the countries to which they are assigned. When I first came to China in 1918, few American correspondents could speak and read Chinese, although the French and German correspondents seemed to have prepared themselves for the assignment.

Excluding a category known as "peephole columnists," those who earn a living by recording the foibles of unimportant people, usually erring women and lecherous men, those who engage in journalism need to study history, philosophy, psychology, literature and languages. This gives a journalist a good start.

Economics helps, if one can find a place where it is taught properly which is very difficult these days because so many economists have come under the influence of John Maynard Keynes, which leads them astray. But as money and taxes are among the most important problems of the day, a working knowledge of economics is of value.

Of course, Donna, you may go in for sports and memorize the names of all the great horses and pitchers, like they do on the 64,000 television shows, but I should like to tell you that sports writers often end up in other fields.

Such men as Heywood Brown, John Reed, Westbrook Pegler, Bob Considine, Paul Gallico and many others started as sports writers and landed all over the lot. And Bill Corum received the same early training that I did in the same school. One can know about Alexander and Aristotle and about horses and baseball. But whatever it is, it is not a pension that can be made a goal of life. A pension can be a limitation on ambition.

The Once Over —by H. I. Phillips

Letters For Special Delivery Representative Kenneth A. Roberts, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

I see where, as chairman of a House subcommittee looking into murder on the highways, you say Congress may have to take action, but add that "it must first solve the problem why motorists drive carelessly." Are you kidding? You drive a car, all members of your committee drive them and so do I, let's be frank. We all know why motorists drive like that. A steering wheel, soft upholstery and a gas pedal transform each of us from polite, considerate, decent, sensible men into queer personalities who think they are space cadets out to make every split second count.

Man is a strange animal. Give him luxury, comfort and enough gasoline and he is overcome by a "gangway for me!" mood. When not in an auto he is a nice guy. He will rise when ladies enter a room, stop on streets to pat babies on the head, worry about the life span of his guppies and smile "After you" in revolving doorways. But put him in his deluxe car and— presto!—he does a complete character switch. He becomes Attila on a time-payment plan and Nero using push-button operation.

He can be a half hour late on foot and feel no pain, even if on important business, but to be 10 seconds behind time in a flivver on a trip of no value whatever sends his blood pressure up. The curious part of it is that all the time he is driving like a ruthless, arrogant and ungracious stinker he is belying about the reckless driving of other drivers. He can cry "Dig those crazy operators!" while he himself is ignoring speed limits, brushing off laws and leering at caution lights. He can beat a red light on his way to a Safety Convention and take off somebody's fenders en route

Those Who Like People Shun Pullman For Coach

A "roomette" on the train—that was the old lady's present from her children. And she didn't like it a bit. There would be three days and two night's travel before they met her in the East. They loved her, wanted her to have every comfort on her journey. So they bought this "roomette" accommodation—where courteous porters would see after her, bring meals on trays, where she could rest in privacy.

Privacy, that was the trouble. The old lady preferred travelling by day coach, where there were lots of folks going lots of places, talking and laughing and maybe even singing. It was the holiday season, wasn't it?

Her eyes sparkled when there were people around. She liked them, liked watching and listening to them. And invariably she found one or two seat companions who told her about themselves.

Once before, taking the same journey, she had nixed said the day coach was very pleasant. The children were annoyed. For younger people going shorter distances, they said. But not for their old mother, who walked with a cane on her "bad" days, who could not possibly trudge through train cars to the diner. On that trip she settled for a Pullman section. Reluctantly, at first—but before a hundred miles had passed she had made friends. All was well. And at the journey's end, met by her eager family, there was much bowing, smiling and fond goodbyes for the old lady to attend to. No, that Pullman was almost as friendly as the day coach.

There was a strength of character about her which created confidence. Her brown eyes were expectant, sympathetic and warm with humor. Never with tears. If a situation were bad enough to cry about, it was too bad to waste time on weeping. Long life had given her the ability to know what things can be changed for the better, what worsened. She knew one from the other, applying action or acceptance as indicated. She listened as people talked, with keen interest but without advice. When they finished telling her what they had wished to tell, it was as if she had suggested some solution—which she had not. And her confidants were usually unaware that she had listened far more than she had spoken.

In the comfortable roomette she was miserable. Books, her own thoughts—excellent companions indeed; but not nearly so much fun as being in the stream of life. Out in the day coach, she stood it until the train reached Chicago, then there was a commotion about changing her ticket. The children would just have to understand. A person deserved to enjoy a few "eccentricities"—and if she liked people, people she must have!

Robert S. Allen Reports

Foreign Aid Survey Used Against Middle East Plan

Washington, Jan. 15—A blistering report on foreign aid spending is at the bottom of quite a bit of that congressional bombarding of the President's new Middle East policy.

Foes of the plan are using this backstage report as heavy ammunition against it.

Based on a House Government Operations Subcommittee investigation of foreign aid spending in Iran, the report caustically charges extensive waste, incompetence, mismanagement, and large expenditures to oil interests.

One of the conclusions of this survey is particularly being made a lot of by opponents of the proposed Middle East policy.

Following is what it says: "The conduct of U.S. operations appears to have been based on the assumption that as long as aid funds were spent promptly it was not a matter of consequence as to what they were spent for. Members of the U. S. Mission who objected to the free-wheeling nature of these operations were either disciplined or labeled as incompetent."

"From 1953 to 1956, the U.S. gave Iran more than a quarter of a billion dollars in aid... These expenditures were undertaken without prior planning or sound programming, and with a conspicuous lack of attention on the part of U. S. and Iranian officials to the requirements of prudent management... The resulting opportunities for waste and loss of funds were considerable... It was not U. S. know-how, but U. S. dollars which were Iran's chief gain."

There is an ironic angle to the use being made of this report to fight the President's new policy.

While the opposition is extensively circulating this damaging criticism of foreign aid, the State Department is doing everything possible to prevent its public use.

Heavy pressure is being exerted on the investigating subcommittee, headed by Representative Porter Hardy (D., Va.) to either shelve the report or to water it down. Hardy is vigorously resisting that. He is demanding unedited publication. Outcome of this backstage wrangle is conjectural.

Meanwhile, unabridged copies of the report are in the hands of members of the House and Senate committees which are holding hearings on the President's Middle East policy. While the State Department is busily endeavoring to pigeonhole the highly critical report or to pull its teeth, it is being used by these committees to grill officials about foreign aid spending.

darmes, and National Iranian Oil Company.

The Iranian army particularly did well. It is credited with pulling a squeeze play for a double round of aid payments, after learning that a "bonus" had been paid to the police and gendarmes.

Following are highlights of the committee's account of this matter:

"In November, approximately $320,000 was paid to the Iranian army as a bonus. To what extent this extraordinary expenditure was made with the prior knowledge of the U. S. Mission is not clear, although there is some evidence to indicate that consultation had taken place. Subsequently, the police and gendarmerie put in claims for similar treatment, with the result that $300,000 was given to the gendarmerie and $120,000 to the police.

"Before the end of March, an additional bonus of $640,000 was paid to the army."

The report charges flatly that millions of aid funds were used to make up the deficit of the National Iranian Oil Company, as follows:

"An item of $12,200,000 to support this oil company is especially interesting. Prior to the furnishing of U. S. assistance, the cost of maintaining this company had not been a charge against the budget of the Iranian government... But with the beginning of U. S. aid, most of these deficits suddenly became a part of the government's budget and thus eligible for grants of U. S. dollars."

The property and handling of various other Iranian aid expenditures are also sharply challenged by the report. Following is one instance:

"Withdrawals by the Iranian government from aid account No. 30824 are subject to question not only in terms of justification of their purpose but also on the amount. In the first four months the U. S. Mission discovered that the account had been drawn upon to meet the government's deficit by approximately $400,000 more than the deficit actually was."

"It has since been stated that this 'overdraft' has been reconciled... As far as the subcommittee can determine this reconciliation was accomplished chiefly by reducing the statement of the government's needs for a later period by this particular amount. But just what happened to this money and why it was drawn out is still a mystery to the subcommittee."

Note: Iran is a member of the Baghdad Pact. Others are Britain, Iraq, Turkey and Pakistan. The U. S. is not a direct participant in this alliance, but largely finances it.

My New York —by Mel Heimer

New York — There is this much to be said for New York City, after the pros have been propounded and the cons condemned, and the dea d e a d wood cleared away: without a doubt it is the easiest city in America in which to lay hands on a bottle of champagne.

As a typical, chic, smart, cosmopolitan New Yorker (we all drink champagne here, you know, just before drifting into the Auto-mat on our dinner jackets and cummerbunds) who lives by the bubbly and no doubt shall die by it, like the warrior with his sword—let me say flatly that other cities can be pretty frightening to a champagne drinker, at times.

More than once I have been marooned on a foreign island, such as Akron, O., or Milan, Italy... and absolutely unable, my dear, to lay hands on a glass of Cordon Rouge '43. The whole thing can be pretty sickening, let me tell you.

New York, however, is different. The stuff virtually drips out of the faucets in the sink. Starting in with Twenty-One, where there is on display in the dining room a complete display of all 11 sizes of bubbly bottles (from the split, or baby, up to the Nebuchadnezzar, which holds 20 quarts), there's hardly a smart

It may be that the champagne center of Manhattan is the Pierre hotel at 61st and Fifth, where, in at least one recent year, the sommelier has supervised the opening of 12 Nebuchadnezzars. One of these babies, incidentally, holds a hundred glasses of the wine that cheers, and is yours for the asking, or that is, for a token payment of two hundred bucks. It stands 37 inches high and can hang you over for at least a week. And we all know what champagne hangovers are like, now don't we?

Research discloses that the Waldorf does quite a rushing business in the grape, too, and like the Pierre, it makes a handsome production of opening one of the big Bertas, such as the Rehoboth (six quarts) or the Balhazar (12 quarts). The handsome, silver-bearded wine steward there has the bottle fetched up from a special refrigerator and then opened at table by a two-waiter attack patrol, who make sure the cork doesn't whang into a nearby dowager and kill her dead.

Fire Causes $5,000 Damage At DeVivo's Grocery Store

Sub-Zero Temperature Hampers Fight

STROUDSBURG firemen fought fire and ice yesterday to save a burning building at 31 N. Ninth St. Flames caused an estimated $5,000 damage to the Joseph DeVivo grocery store and two rooms of an apartment overhead.

On the coldest night of the year and with temperatures still hovering below zero at 8:55 a.m. when the alarm sounded, firemen battled to keep their water lines free of ice and to prevent formation of ice on their own coats and helmets from hampering their movements.

Chief Millard Marsh said the fire started in the chimney of the building, then spread through partitions to parts of the store and into the upstairs apartment.

Firemen concentrated, successfully, on keeping the blaze in one side (facing Sarah St.) of the building. Because of this the fire was prevented from spreading throughout the structure and damage was cut drastically.

The fire was discovered at about 8:35 by DeVivo when he opened his store for the morning. Heaviest damage was apparently caused in the two front rooms of the apartment, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Norman Frisbie.

Furnishings
Mrs. Frisbie told firemen that nearly all the furnishings in the front bedroom had been destroyed. Smoke and water damage was heavy in other parts of the apartment.

Marsh said that the fire was one of the "hardest" the company has had in recent months. Heavy, billowing smoke prevented firemen from making easy access to the top and sides of the building.

Despite the sub-zero temperatures, no water hose was lost in use due to freezing water, Marsh said. Some lines—mainly one and a half inch hose—burst during the two and a half hour fight against the fire.

This was caused by decay of hose fabric, however, Marsh said. Most of the hose was used by the company in its work during the 1955 flood and the post-flood recovery period. Mud, sand and silt deposits on the outside caused decay over a prolonged expanse of time.

The building itself also made firefighting difficult, Marsh said. It is an old structure which has been weatherboarded and has a layer of "facing" on the exterior.

Firemen used the new Phoenix aerial truck to get on the roof of the building. There they chopped holes in the roof to permit access with hose to the second-floor apartment.

In one sense yesterday morning's fire really became a "community affair," firemen said.

Capt. Charles Baker of the Salvation Army and workers from there arrived on the scene when the fire was at its peak. They served coffee to the firemen.

Show owner Sam Lee—whose shop adjoins the building and was slightly damaged—opened his doors to firemen.

Because water from the fight had flowed out into the streets and frozen, Department of Highways workers spread ashes and cinders on the highway when the fire was out.

Monroe County Police Officials Question Three Holdup, Burglary Suspects In Easton

POLICE OFFICIALS from Monroe County took lengthy statements from three men in Easton prison yesterday setting down details of four major holdups and a burglary which the men admit committing in this area.

The men—arrested over the weekend—are James Louis Kessler, 22, of 507 Clinton Terrace, Easton, formerly of Wind Gap RD; Frederick Charles Kessler, 16, of 602 William St., Pen Argyl, his brother; Shervill (Sherry) Franklin Schmidt, 22, of 11 N. Warren St., Easton.

Police who questioned the three men yesterday were the following: State troopers Donald Henzey and Evan Chaplin, Stroudsburg; troopers Robert Latzo and James Horan, Mount Pocono barracks, and Travis Seese, East Stroudsburg, Chief of Police.

Seese questioned the men concerning the Dec. 19 armed robbery of Ruth Naugle and Arlene West at their apartment in East Stroudsburg. James Kessler has admitted this robbery alone.

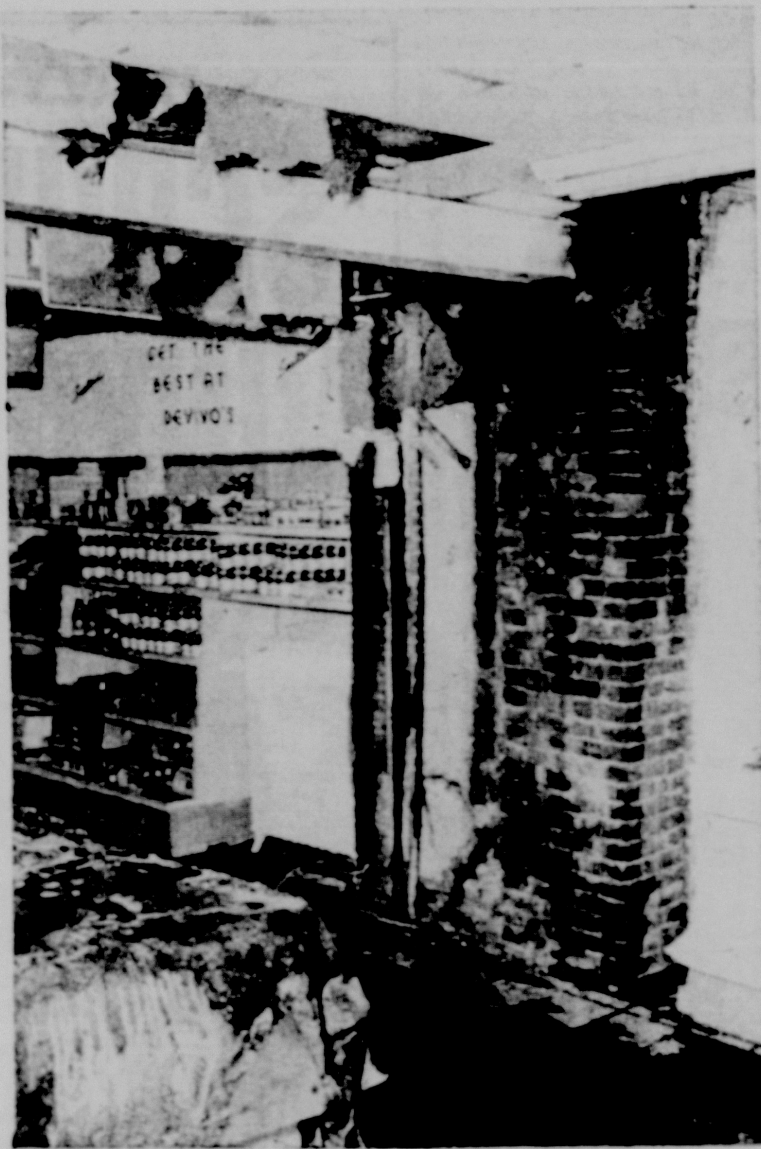

Other local robberies in which James and Frederick Kessler were involved: holdup of Theodore Kelechava at the garage in his home at 523 Thomas St., Stroudsburg, on Dec. 28; holdup of the Texaco filling station in Tannersville on Route 611, on Dec. 29; holdup of Phil and Don's Mountainhome diner on Dec. 29.

James Kessler and Schmidt have also admitted burglarizing the home of Dr. and Mrs. Roman Batory in Cherry Valley on Jan. 9.

Officials said last night that the statements are the first step in the legal process toward arraignment of the three men. Next step: Conference with Monroe County District Attorney Detlef Hansen for further action.

Local officials will lodge detainees against the three men for later trial on local charges. Northampton County's charges against the men include robberies of two women in Nazareth and Bangor.

Much of the loot was recovered in the homes of the three suspects.

THE ROOT OF TROUBLE in early morning fire yesterday at DeVivo grocery on N. Ninth St. was this chimney. Firemen said fire started here, spread through partitions to part of store and upstairs apartment. (Staff Photo by MacLeod)

Methodist Church Plans To Continue Building Program

By Paul Carlson

BUCK HILL FALLS—Methodist Board of Missions was informed yesterday that the denomination will continue to move forward in the next few years in the greatest building program in its history.

Dr. Earl R. Brown, general secretary of the Division of National Missions, made the statement before some 600 persons attending the board's 17th annual meeting here.

Since the three major Methodist bodies united in 1940, the value of Methodist property in the United States has risen from $208,566,788 to $1,826,172,575, Dr. Brown reported.

"To accept our Methodist responsibility in the building of new sanctuaries across America," he added, "we will probably need to build a minimum of three churches every week during the next decade."

Pointing out that the building boom is not confined to the United States, Dr. Brown expressed the possibility that "during the next four years church building and improvement in Alaska will amount to not less than three quarters of a million dollars."

"More church extension projects were undertaken in Hawaii in the past year than in any single previous year in Methodist history there," he said. "This was in step with Hawaii's $120,000,000 program of construction of homes, schools, business buildings, hotels and roads."

Pennsylvania Shows Talent In Festival

HARRISBURG, Jan. 15 (AP)—Pennsylvania good naturedly flexed its agriculture muscles tonight at a 90-minute rural talent festival before 10,000 visitors at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

Some 450 members of farm families presented the program depicting in song and historic tableaux the agricultural growth of the state and the events and people responsible for it.

The show highlighted second-day activities at the 41st annual farm exposition. The day's attendance was estimated at 95,000, an increase of 10,000 from the opening day Monday.

The players followed the show theme "We have it—in Pennsylvania" by spelling out in song and folk dance advances made over the last century in the state's farm productivity.

Machinery
Modern machinery's part in the growth was emphasized by the volunteer players who spent many hours during the last few weeks working on their parts at local rehearsals.

W. R. Gordon, Pennsylvania State University, wrote, directed and produced the show this year for the 12th time. He was presented a citation by William L. Henning, secretary of agriculture "for 12 years of admirable service."

Several farm organization bands and choruses participated in the show. Meanwhile, those unable to crowd into the arena toured the 14-acre farm show building, which boasts more than 10,000 competitive exhibits and several million dollars worth of commercial displays.

Already a large portion of the $58,000 offered in premiums has been awarded in judging of farm products.

National Guard Officials Clarify Recent Federal Rule

AREA National Guard officials last night rushed to clarify issues growing out of a new Army ruling on new recruits.

Col. Walter W. Unley, regimental commander and Lt. Col. John J. Remetta, battalion commander, conferred with Lt. Richard Rugg Jr., commanding officer of Company F, and Lt. Nelson Silfee, commanding officer of Company G, both Monroe County.

The officers released the following clarification:
"Only 152 vacancies remain in the two companies before they will reach their full, normal strength. Once these are filled everyone enlisting will have to take the active six months duty required in the new ruling."

Different Story
"Those who enlist before April 1, 1957, however, do not have to take the six months' active duty providing they are under 18½ years old or have had prior service in the armed forces."

"Men who now belong to the companies are not affected by the new rule. The rule is in accordance with the Reserve Forces Act of 1955."

Misunderstanding of the new Army ruling grew out of published stories carried in most daily newspapers this week. The stories indicated that "new" recruits would have to serve on active duty six months.

Local National Guard officials pointed out that the two major exceptions listed above cut down on the number of men affected by the rule.

Men in this area desiring more information about service in either National Guard company should contact 1st Sgt. Vincent Marek or Robert Schoonover at 1276, National Guard headquarters, or at their home phones. Marek's phone is 1400-J-2. Schoonover's is 648-M.

Two Suspects Make Plea Of Innocence

MILFORD — Two Port Jervis farm workers last night pleaded innocent to charges they held up a Matamoros finance company official last Wednesday.

Felix Riviolo Del Moral, 22, and Flor Pantoja, 27, both of Limekill Rd., Port Jervis, RD 2, entered the pleas through an interpreter before Justice of the Peace Willard Durr.

However, they were identified at the hearing by the victim, James Monaghan, manager of the Individual Finance Corp. and Loan Co. Durr then committed them to the Pike County Jail to await grand jury action.

The suspects, together with a third man, were arrested the day after Monaghan was robbed of $300. The other suspect, Victor Tirado, 30, committed suicide a short time after his arrest.

Planning Big Factor In Room

"CLIMB ON your own couch and analyze yourself before you begin to think about decorating your own home," says decorator William Pahlmann, author of The Pahlmann Book of Interior Design.

"Not every woman needs a decorator," he explains, "but some people are just beyond creating a setting for themselves. Before buying expensive fabrics and wallpapers, analyze yourself to discover who you are. That way you'll understand just what you'd like in your own home."

How to go about it? List Your Likes. Pahlmann advises taking a pencil and paper in hand, listing your likes, dislikes and all your personal characteristics that come to mind. If you're sharing the home with others, do a similar analysis of their preferences also. The home should be a happy place and if any item in the decor displeases or repels those living with it, the item should be removed.

After you decide what you like, begin collecting clippings from newspapers, magazines and manufacturers' catalogues. Keep them in separate manila folders for easy reference, comparison and study. Pahlmann advises. You can start this collection long before the actual work begins, as your choice of color, fabric and furniture should be timeless.

The next thing to consider is function. What will the piece of furniture do? Will the curtains control light and air as they are supposed to or will they just be lovely to look at?

Carry Measurements. One very important point is to take measurements of everything that is measurable and keep the list in your handbag so that it will be readily available when you want it.

"Jot down your window height and width, door openings, room dimensions, distance between windows, distance from wall to fireplace or from wall to door. After that make a floor plan of your room or get one prepared by a professional," Pahlmann says. "When you have all these things in hand and have made a tour of stores, museums, and friends' homes to see what you like then decide whether you can do the job yourself or whether you should call for professional assistance."

Decorating takes time and money, he says. Sometimes a woman has the money but not the time, another woman has time but no money. Whatever the circumstances, don't let your lack of know-how cause frustrations. Select a decorator or interior designer, not just a friend who may dabble in decoration just for the fun of it. Whatever happens, Pahlmann advises, it is important that you choose decorative pieces that you like, not what your mother, mother-in-law, or neighbor suggests.

Entrances Important

A QUICK test of your home's convenience is the number of outside entrances it provides, suggests the Institute of Home Designers.

In order to have the proper traffic pattern for guests, service deliveries, storage, youngsters, etc., it says, the average one story home should have three entrances—to the front, to the rear of the house at or next to the kitchen, and to the basement.

Use For Water Pistol

A TOY water pistol or a small syringe is fine for wetting down the edges of plaster and concrete before a hole or crack is filled with patching compound.

Increase Capacity

RUNNING closet pole across the width rather than the length of a closet will greatly increase its storage capacity.

Statistics On Mortgage

UNITED STATES farm mortgage debt at a total of $8,200,000,000 has doubled since 1945 while mortgage debts on homes in towns and cities has increased 4½ times.

Linseed Oil Gives Natural Finish

THERE ARE several ways to obtain a so-called natural finish that reveals the grain of wood to some degree. One is to apply several thin coats of linseed oil and finish with wax. Another is to apply shellac or varnish before waxing. Shellac should be thinned with alcohol at least half and half or in accordance with directions on the can.

Rust Reduces Water Flow

IF YOU'VE noticed that the water pressure at the kitchen sink is sort of low, unscrew the little filter in the spout of the faucet. Chances are that it's filled with rust and metal particles which is reducing the flow of water.

Screwdriver Sharpening Rule

THE RULE to follow when you sharpen a screwdriver is to keep the point blunt. If you sharpen it the way you would a knife, the edge will ruin the heads of the screws and the point won't last long.

Too Much Varnish

WHILE VARNISH can be applied over old varnish, if you build up too thick a coating the finish coat may crack. For this reason it's best to sand down a heavy accumulation of varnish before refinishing.

Modern Type Fences Change In Style

FENCES, like everything else connected with the modern home, are changing in style.

Picket fences and split rail fences continue to hold their popularity, but the Western Pine Assn., which comprises more than 100 saw-mills and lumber producers, reports a growing trend toward board fences of various individual designs.

Woven fences, angled board screens and paneled fences are winning wide favor.

The reasons for a fence are many. It may be designed to keep out intruders, to keep children or pets in, or for back-yard privacy. It can be used to add balance to the architecture of the house, such as making a tall, narrow house seem wider. It may serve as a background for flowers or vines, or as a separation between the service area and the yard, the vegetable garden and the flower garden, or the children's play area and the rest of the grounds.

A fence also can screen your yard from objectionable views or it can serve as a windbreak. Decide on what you want your fence to do before you decide whether to make it sturdy or light, solid or open.

Board fences appeal to men with a do-it-yourself yen. Regardless of the design, there are certain basic rules for a board fence. Sturdy posts are essential—such as 4 by 4s—and these should be spaced no more than 8 feet apart. Postholes should not be much larger than the size of the post. Use of a post hole digger, which can be rented in many cases, makes this possible. The hole should be about equal to a third of the length of the post. Tamp 2 inches of gravel in the bottom of the hole before sinking the post and then tramp the earth firmly around the post.

Proper nailing is important. Use aluminum or other non-rusting nails. Boards 1-inch thick call for eightpenny nails and each board width of 6 inches or less calls for two nails, widths of eight inches or more call for three nails.

Place Screws In Shellac

TO PREVENT screws from vibrating out of machinery or moving parts, place the heads in shellac before screwing them in place. The shellac will hold the heads in place, but can be broken loose easily by a firm pressure on the screw driver.

Spiders, Flies Winter Pests In Homes Throughout Nation

SPIDERS AND FLIES: It may be mid-winter, but two pests that are mighty common right now are spiders and attic flies. We've never seen so many "attic" or "cluster" flies as we've seen this winter. Usually during the frozen winter months we are free of flies, but homeowners write to tell us they are pestered to death with these winged pests.

Fortunately, many of the flies are rather sluggish and can be swatted without your having to be nimble as a tennis player. Another control measure lies in using the aerosol bombs, or spraying windows with malathion or pyrethrum fly sprays.

Spiders make a meal on these flies, but most homeowners resent having spiders in the home. Flies and other insects are the main food supply for spiders, but their webs collect dust and dirt and become unsightly. Sweeping down the webs helps temporarily, but it's a waste of time since spiders will spin a new set of webs in a jiffy. A better way to get rid of spiders is to spray the basement with an ordinary lindane household spray. One dose of lindane will lick these eight-legged pests and you can mix your own spray or use either a wettable powder or the liquid.

Those black flies buzzing around your house plants are the so-called fungus gnats. They lay eggs in the soil of house plants, and these eggs hatch into slender legless maggots which are white and devastating. Dusting the soil with schlorane or DDT will kill both eggs and maggots. You can also spray your plants with DDT or a household spray, once every two weeks until the gnats are licked. Incidentally, springtails and other worms in the soil can be checked by the chlordane or DDT treatment.

Question Box

Question of the Week: M. S. of Stroudsburg: "Last year I planted some giant sized glad bulbs. They blossomed heavily, but when I dug them up, instead of one or two nice bulbs, we found six or more very small bulbs. Are they all right to plant. How can we get them to produce the bigger bulbs?"

The small bulbs are good for planting. Personally, I'd just as soon have a good high-crowned young corn one and one-half inch across, or smaller, than a large-sized flat one. The very large, flat corns are less desirable than the moderate sized ones, any glad specialist will tell you.

You can develop larger glad bulbs instead of a lot of small ones, simply by cutting out all the eyes but one before planting. A big bulb has from four to six eyes, and if these are dug out (all except one) you get a giant flower stalk, and a single bulb.

A larger flowering bulb produces blossoms earlier than a smaller bulb, and there may be as much as a week's difference in blooming date. Don't let bulb size fool you into seeking the larger ones. Usually a number two or number three will produce almost as good blossoms as a number one size, which is a good deal more expensive.

Mrs. R. E. of East Bangor: "My fuchsia plant drops its buds when they are about one quarter-inch across, and just beginning to show pink. A lot of buds form but none of them mature. What can I do to make the buds develop and reach full bloom?"

The fuchsia makes a poor flowering plant in the average home in the winter. Flower and bud drop are due to high temperature or poor light. Usually, they do not form a flower bud if the temperature is much above 65 degrees. Fuchsia is a spring and summer blooming plant, enjoying lots of moisture and high humidity. Winter normally is the fuchsia's resting season. You can take slips from your plant now and have them well rooted for bloom in late winter or very early spring. Or, old plants can be dried off somewhat in winter, and kept in the cellar until spring, then cut back and new growth allowed to come on.

Engineers Award Pact

SUPER TESTS FOR SUPER JETS

WHO PROTECTS THE PILOTS and planes that are busily protecting the security of the free world? One who does is the AiResearch company at its five-million-dollar test plant on the Arizona desert, near Phoenix. Here the firm produces components for 90 per cent of the free world's aircraft. These components include gas and air turbines, pneumatic controls and cabin pressure regulators. Some of these turbines rotate at more than 100,000 revolutions a minute compared to an auto engine with 3,000 rmp. Once these gadgets are off the assembly lines, they are tested under simulated conditions. Here is where planes and men are saved from destruction. Atmosphere chambers conduct hot and cold tests and create conditions which a jet would encounter while diving or climbing. Another part of the laboratory contains aircraft vibrators which test parts for shocks. In the heat of the desert, safeguards are fashioned for the cold war.

Valves take pressure of 300 pounds per square inch.

An air turbine refrigeration package is set up for testing in cabin atmosphere.

Turbine engine is tested in a reinforced concrete cell.

Off the assembly line come rows of air turbine starters. They're ready for trials.

Saylorsburg Sports Car Club To Conduct Regular Race On Ice At Naomi Lake Sunday

ON THE heels (or rear wheels) of a "successful" trial run last Saturday the sports car club from Saylorsburg will stage a full-scale "race on the ice" this coming Sunday.

The race will be held at Naomi Lake, Pocono Pines, scene of last week's dry run. There will be an estimated 20 to 30 cars entered.

According to race coordinator Franklin C. (Skip) Miller this Sunday's event will begin at 1 p.m. All sports car enthusiasts in the county are invited to take part if they like. Trophies will be awarded to winners.

Interested owners or drivers are asked to contact either Miller, by post card at Pocono Pines or the Simms-Martin Garage in Saylorsburg. "No hot rods or jalopies" are desired in the race, Miller said. It's designed purely for regular sports cars.

Successful Miller said that Saturday's trial run was "very successful even though it got started later than scheduled." The lake was "perfect" for driving, he said. Included in the lineup of cars were several MGs, an Austin-Healey, two Fords and an Italian Fiat, Miller said.

No attempt was made last Saturday to set speed records or time "heats." Cars simply were driven on a pre-established course running around the two "islands" in the lake. Purpose of the trial was to let area drivers "get the feel of driving on ice."

This was the first time in the history of the Eastern States that such a race had been held, so far as is known. Miller said that drivers made the trial with the tops of their cars "down" — even in the 25-degree cold — to allow for better visibility.

Firemen Plan To Worship

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 15 (AP)—A heavily mustached gunman robbed the Lincolnway branch of the National Bank and Trust Co., of at least $40,000 before noon today.

The dark complexioned robber vaulted over a counter and demanded the money from a teller. He walked out of the bank carrying several bags of money. He had a .38 caliber snubnosed pistol.

State police said the man is about 40 and weighs 185 to 200 pounds. He is 5-feet-9. He was wearing a brown hat and a dark brown herringbone coat.

Former Boxer, Wrestler To Speak At Rally For Youth At Wind Gap Methodist Church

GENE STANLEY, better known to boxing and wrestling fans as Mr. America and "Sheik of Araby", will conduct a youth rally Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Wind Gap Methodist Church.

Gene's brilliant boxing career began in 1929, when he won the Michigan State middleweight championship. In 1936, he met and defeated the famous German champion, Adolph Heuser. This bout was fought in Germany under the direction of Adolph Hitler.

In 1937, Gene was awarded the "Apollo of France" award for being the best built athlete in the country. After having completed his boxing career Gene wrestled his way to the title of "Mr. America", having appeared in countless television bouts with long blond hair. He is also familiar to television wrestling fans as "John the Wrestler", "Jean Valjean", and "Sheik of Araby". Several years ago, Gene Stanley yielded his life and heart to Jesus Christ and signed a contract with God.

Gene has traveled around the world, once as a boxer, having even fought on several occasions behind the iron curtain; another time as a wrestler and now again as a preacher of the Gospel.

At the present time, he is traveling throughout the United States, speaking in churches, at youth rallies, high schools and on radio and television programs.

70 Flee From Fire

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15 (AP)—Hampered by thick smoke, a steady snowfall and high winds, firemen tonight battled a raging five alarm blaze in a four story building on Broad Street just south of center city.

Two hours after the first alarm sounded at 5 p.m., Fire Chief George Hink said all residents of the Willing Apartments, on the upper floors of the building, apparently had been evacuated.

An estimated 70 persons fled the burning structure, some of them aided down fire ladders and a real fire escape.

Just Between Us

—By Bobby Westbrook

It may not contribute to the "best-dressed" look but small cushions tied on at strategic places might be a good idea for the next few days. More people were making three point landings yesterday as their feet slipped on the ice, unseen but still slippery, under the icings of snow.

What they lacked in numbers, the pedestrians made up in antics. There was sort of a ghost-town atmosphere last night with every one without pressing business elsewhere staying snug and warm by their own firesides—a source of envy to the rest of us, shivering alternately from cold and from the shock of skidding.

With no cars parked on either side of the street, there was fortunately plenty of skidding room but it still isn't pleasant. Which makes it all the more remarkable that, while the old and the timid were safe at home, those charter members of the Woman's Club, obviously neither, were in their expected places at the Junior Women's Club program last night.

Every year the Juniors seem to get younger and prettier. I couldn't help thinking as I watched them arriving at the meeting last night. Either there are a lot of new young matrons in town or the ones I know have grown out of all recognition. Judging from all the activities they're planning though, we will get to know them even if we don't now.

And so it is with rugs, carpets and hard-surfaced floor coverings. Famous designers and manufacturers have come up with patterns, styles, colors and textures to supply the demands of American homemakers. To see a complete line of just such fine floor coverings, stop at the Monroe County General Flooring Co., 914 North Ninth Street, Stroudsburg, Ph. 508-J.

Notice our complete line of Valentines is now on display. They're pretty, witty, and gassy, dripping with sentiment, and, in some cases, delightfully coy. One can buy a verse that expresses undying love—or a catty little card that boldly announces "There's no one like you—perhaps it's just as well. If you're in love . . . if you're falling out . . . and if you're in a mood to tell someone so . . . we're in the mood too—to sell you a card.

It's a bit difficult to come down to earth and write a column today, because ever since Saturday I've been buried under an ever-increasing number of oil paintings, water colors, and pen and ink sketches. I've been tied up with Scotch tape and sticky with glue . . . and I've talked with artists, both amateur and professional, who have, naturally, a great deal of pride in their work.

After numbering nearly 110 entries, and noting that others will undoubtedly arrive before the deadline late this (Monday) afternoon, I'm convinced of one thing — our Wyckoff art show this year will be one of the largest and finest our store has ever sponsored. This is our twentieth show, and it is inspiring to see that many of the artists exhibiting in 1957 have exhibited in numerous previous shows . . . Mary Bonita Weingartner, Sterling and Dorothy Strauser, Elsie Logan, Alice Sutton, Peter Heiden, Harvard Macpherson, Henrietta Hobbs, and Olivia Dreher, to name just a few.

Sometimes some of the regular exhibitors drop from the show for a year or so . . . but then they return, and always it is interesting to note the changes wrought during even a brief interlude away. Many of the artists whose work is most familiar to local audiences, have progressed breathtakingly . . . we have seen amateurs become professionals, professionals reach new heights of acclaim . . . and we have seen amateurs who entered for the first time rather apologetically become better and better each time out, until their work today has authority, undeniable charm, and importance.

I am not an art critic . . . I only know that I like what I like, and when I like it, I do so without apology. Certainly it is true that there has never been an art show at Wyckoff's during which I didn't yearn to own at least two or three of the paintings. We have a wealth of talent in this area, and you will agree with me after our show opens tomorrow that many of the paintings are not only GOOD, they are very, very good.

Come in and enjoy your neighbors' talents! I understand that this year's show will be housed in our Toy Store. Then, while you're in an artistic mood, visit our second floor gallery of 75 scenes from the Life of Christ, painted in water color by Jacques Barosin. Be our guest —there's so much to see . . . and it's FREE!

Men Claim Place As Best-Dressed; Well, Dressed Anyway

By Leonard Randolph

Well, there it is. The men got left out in the cold again.

It's bad enough that the discerning ladies and gentlemen up at the New York Dress Institute (is this an asylum for demented dressers?) should rack up its list of "best-dressed women" every year and say nary a word about all us best-dressed men.

Now here we are right in Monroe county picking and choosing among the ladies and passing the boys by.

It's all unfortunate fact that most people never pay any attention to what men have on—especially the man who's wearing it. But we've decided that action must be taken to remedy this situation. Injustice must be done! Well-dressed men must unite! Shirkers of the world—throw off your blue serge!

In an effort to bring home (right downtown, here, we mean) the fact that men wear clothes, too, we have asked an impartial (mothers, brothers, aunts, sisters, uncles-in-law and haberdashers) jury to name for us the five best-dressed men in Monroe County.

We Can't All Win, Boys

The results are published below, with suitable comment. (Dear Mrs. Westbrook: We would suggest that, if you use these on the air or in any other public forum that they be delivered in a comfortably chatty (not to be confused with catty) tone of voice which will help our oil on the otherwise troubled wafers stirred up by malcontents who think they are the height of sartorial impeccability.)

MUSIC: (Faded up and under background—"Hand Me Down My Walkin' Cane" or some other suitably transient selection.)

ANNOUNCER: Good evening, gentlemen. Well, here we are again. We know all of you have been awaiting this moment eagerly ever since you found out that we were at Station GUG where we were setting out to determine who our best-dressed gentlemen are. Well, we've come up with our natural-born results and we hope they'll meet with your approval. And here's the man who's gonna tell you all about it: the man who invented the triple Windsor knot; the man who invented a collar stay that REALLY stays; the men who introduced the zippable zipper—Ellsworth Fortesque Gunnyhack!

GUNNYHACK: Thank you, thank you, Ed Sommers, and hello out there. First of all, before we start in with our list, I just want to remind you that I think everybody out there dresses like nobody's business (and that's exactly what it is, too) but we feel that certain standards are set by you-all who are "in the know" about clothes.

Accentuate the Positive

Take, for example, the first man on our list. He's a man who is worthy of standing right alongside the best-dressed, best-dressed man on Anybody's list. We'd put him beside Elvis Presley any old day and we think he'd compare favorably. He's none other than that man about town Thomas P.

THE MEN FIGHT BACK! This stylish photograph illustrates the latest trends in men's fashions. This year's "best-dressed" man will be seen in such hitherto-taboo accessories as well-patched storm boots (hip style) and hardly-collapsible umbrellas. This photograph was posed by a paid, professional model. (Staff Photo by Randolph)

Argyle, a tweedy soul who has set a pattern all Monroe county men could easily follow. We say easily because you need is one tweed suit and a pair of Interwovens and you're all set. But Argyle is OUR idea of what the simply-clothed man should wear: no shirt, no tie, no hat, no gloves, no shoes. For economy and basic adherence to a style, you can't beat Argyle.

Then there's a terrific gent whom you all know, a man whose distinctive innovations have made themselves felt all over our area. That man, of course, is Streptococcal Digitalis. It was Streptococcal (we call him "Strep" for short) who first introduced the belt-less, suspender-less trouser. This new style, making use of suction cups attached to the waistband of the pant, is considered among the most utilitarian innovations in years. Some men complain of the noisy "pop" created by the removal of the waistband from the waist, but these agitators are largely old-fashioned and are not to be given serious consideration.

Before we go on to our list, here's something that DOES defor men. Dillinger is the man who made the new bold black and white stripes popular for shirts and suits. A charming man with a distinctive 16-inch scar running down the left side of his face, Mr. D. is the father of three affectionate sons who call him "Dads". They are: John Jr., Baby Face Nelson Dillinger and Al Capone Dillinger. With their father, the boys make a handsome quartet and things are always lively in the Dillinger home.

Innovations Noted

No one has ever done more for the American male than our next "best-dressed" gentlemen. Between them, those two have released U. S. men from bondage, they have freed them from the old, accepted taboos.

The first of these two is Aloysius Z. Whoopierane, who will be remembered by all as the first man to wear Bermuda shorts in the winter. Now the new "Blue-knees" fad is sweeping the country. Whoopierane — a well-dressed man who believes that comfort is purely secondary, has also attempted to introduce long woolen underwear for Summer-time use on golf courses. But this move has met with some resistance. Particularly among members of the country club set.

The last man on our list is the man who really tops our roll call of Monroe county's best-dressed men. His name is Blithedale Fungicide and he is responsible for these two primary rules of tonorial (this word cannot be removed by a small operation) elegance:

According to Blithedale: One — Cummerbunds are not suitable for combination with blue jeans or old-fashioned nightgowns.

Two — White shirts should never be worn more than five days running. (We've checked and found out that they shouldn't be worn more than five days walking, either. Thought we'd save you the trouble.) A colored shirt may be worn longer, but the well-dressed man will take his colored shirt off at the end of the seventh day and hang it up in his closet for a couple of days' rest. During the changeover period he will wear a plain, solid-color shirt of some simple hue such as bathhouse rose or cavernous black.

Well, men, that rounds out our list of best-dressed men in Monroe county. We're sorry we couldn't include all you other best-dressers, but time does not permit. If we could, we should certainly have liked to mention Burgess Hal H. Harris for keeping the Summertime straw hat in vogue; Allen K. Beers for producing the fashionable accessory known as dog-on-leash; Harold Ingraham for his loyalty to the Homburg (even before the Eisenhower inauguration in 1952, we might add) and Tom Waring for his outstanding service on behalf of the economy-sized cap.

GUNNYHACK: The third man on our list is known for miles around as the stylist who revolted against the shirt companies and the laundries. He is Wellington Q. Dillinger, our most enterprising interpreter of new fashions out quietly.

Mount Fuji Causes Concern

TOKYO, Jan. 15 (AP)—Climbers on Mount Fuji report steam missing from fissures high up its flanks and Japan fears its famous dormant volcano may erupt for the first time since 1707.

The Central Meteorological Agency says if the report of steam is true it may be the first recorded in years. Splotches of melted snow on the 12,380-foot mountain's cone raised similar fears a few years ago.

THE RECORD

By Bob Clark
Sports Editor

A LITTLE HUMOR does man no harm. Or for that matter, no woman. Here with we print an article written by Edwin Pope of the Sports Library staff, the Studebaker-Packard publication.

Its contents are more or less on the lighter side of events in the sports field and is entitled "Hecklers in Sports."

The story in part:

Kane O'Hara, an 18th century playwright, once had one of his characters beseech another, "Please to moderate the candour of your tongue." The advice is well-taken in many fields, but had O'Hara been in sports, he might have saved himself the ink.

Sports folks are notoriously free with verbal barbs. Players assault the ears of other players with sarcasm and profanity. Players "ride" umpires. Occasionally umpires needle players. And fans heckle both players and umpires.

"Rabbit ears" the sobriquet hung on a performer easily nettled by jeers—has driven many a potential star out of sports. One example was Walter (Dutch) Mails, who pitched seven victories without a defeat for the Cleveland Indians in 1920, yet gave up the game in 1926 because he simply couldn't stand to be belittled.

Only masterful self-control kept Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe of the Detroit Tigers from blowing his top at a favorite catcall employed by his opponents. As a rookie, Rowe romanced a lass named Edna Skinner, who later became his wife. The affair received wide notice and on a radio interview, Rowe interrupted himself to chirp, "How'm I doing Edna?" He never was allowed to forget it.

Yogi Berra, great New York Yankee catcher, also has borne the tirades well. Berra's earthy features did not cause him too much trouble when he was breaking in. But when he finished his third season with a .305 batting average and 100 runs driven in, antagonists began to recognize him as a worthy target. Berra got married during the off-season and at the beginning of the next season, Birdie Tebbets, then Boston Red Sox catcher (now Cincinnati's manager) greeted Berra with, "Hey Yogi . . . how does your wife like living in a tree?"

Berra absorbed it with winces and scowls until late summer, when he still was riding high. Then he began retorting, "You don't hit with your face!" The simple answer has served him well.

Football, too, has its heckling. But here most needles are hurled from coach to coach or coach to player, with fans playing little part in the contest of comments, perhaps because of their distance from the competitors.

In his 29 years as University of Illinois head coach, Bob Zuppke became a master at rattling the opposition with opportune digs. The day his Illini played Minnesota in 1916, they were six-touchdown underdogs. But the Gophers' edge seemed to vanish from the moment the Illini walked onto the field.

Zuppke had instructed halfback Dutch Sternaman to yell across the field to him, "They're not so big Zup!"

"Na!" Zuppke answered in full earshot of the Minnesota team, "and the whole bunch together couldn't add two and two."

Minnesota was visibly shaken and Illinois won, 14-0.

Perry Haughton — the famed "Haughton of Harvard" of the early years in this century — also included a razor-sharp tongue in his equipment. The day of the 1909 game with Yale, both teams lunched in New Haven House. Haughton made a point of speaking loudly and disparagingly of Yale players.

"Fish," Haughton remarked to his All-American tackle Hamilton Fish, "you see that bluebelly sitting over there? That's Hobbs. Treat him kindly now."

And underdog Harvard, set back Yale, 4-0.

Fielding (Hurry Up) Yost, immortal mentor of Michigan, barked at unaggressive squadsmen, "If I should put ye in a greenhouse and give ye an ax and shotgun, ye couldn't get out!"

John Heisman, whose Georgia Tech gridsters recorded the highest score of football history—222-0 over Cumberland on Oct. 7, 1916—called star halfback Red Barron a "flaming jackass" for what he considered extremely poor defensive work.

Less of this is heard in modern times but Georgia Coach Wallace Butts has no known peer at heckling his players to supreme heights. When Bulldogs toss wobbly passes, Butts screams that the ball "is floppin' round like a wounded pigeon." He accuses tackled runners of "tripping over a blade of grass."

At least two case of president-coach heckling have been reported: Dr. William Rainey Harper to Amos Alonzo Stagg at the University of Chicago nearly a half-century ago, and Curly Byrd to Jim

Berrios Choice Over Cadilli

BOSTON, Jan. 15 (AP)—Puerto Rico's Miguel Berrios, fifth ranked featherweight, is favored to defeat Gil Cadilli of San Francisco, in a ten round bout tomorrow night at Mechanics Building. The fight will be televised (ABC) with Boston stations blacked out.

Berrios, considered a good boxer and a hard puncher for a little man, is eager for a shot at Sandy Saddler's featherweight crown. His manager, Jimmy Angelo, has said he will guarantee Saddler $15,000 for a championship match.

Cadilli, from the stable of Sid Flaherty, has had considerable success on the West Coast and numbers former champion Willie Pep among his victims. The San Francisco lad also is reputed to have a stiff punch if not the boxing skill of his favored rival.

Tatum at Maryland during the last decade.

Harper was the velvet-glove brand. He once razed Stagg, who was renowned for his exact deportment. "You're doing a lot of swearing," Stagg, shocked and hurt, denied the accusation.

"Well," said Harper with a twinkle, "maybe that's the trouble. Maybe you should cuss a little."

Though a strong advocate of strong football teams, Dr. Byrd in 1952 fired at Tatum: "If you'd done as much coaching in November as you did in September and October, we wouldn't have lost a game."

Retaliated Tatum: "Just before we made one trip, Dr. Byrd gave me a couple of pass plays. They were good, except that we had four backs and two ends as receivers — and nobody to throw the ball."

A big part of college basketball's spoken conflict consists of a long-drawn-out "boo" from spectators, directed toward referees or opponents toeing the line for foul shots. But there have been brisk broadsides in professional basketball.

Horace (Bones) McKinney, now assistant basketball coach and chaplain at Wake Forest College, was an artist with words.

McKinney and the Boston Celtics were playing Milwaukee one evening and having particular difficulty on "calls" from referee Sid Borgia. The dam broke when McKinney was whistled down for charging, a virtually unheard-of penalty for an offensive player.

McKinney stalked away from Borgia, and as he did he flipped the ball backwards over his shoulder. It hit the court near Borgia's assistant.

"That's all for you!" bellowed Borgia, in a rage.

"What for?" demanded McKinney.

"For trying to hit an official," Borgia said.

"You think I'd miss if I really tried?" said McKinney. "Give me that ball and I'll show you."

(McKinney lost the argument.)

Red Auerbach of Washington and Boston and Al Cervi of Syracuse, both coaches, have been among the most feared of basketball bench-jockeys. Add to that twosome Joe Lapchick, former coach of the New York Knickerbockers, who, upset at what he considered injustice on official's part, reached into his pocket, threw several coins onto the court and shouted, "Here! You may as well have everything I've got!"

NCAA Rules Unit Takes Steps To Outlaw 'Dangerous' Protective Face Mask Grabbing

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15 (AP)—The seemingly tranquil meeting of the powerful Football Rules Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. erupted into action today and took strides to outlaw protective face mask grabbing "before the practice becomes dangerous."

E. E. (Tad) Wieman, former head coach at Princeton and Michigan and now athletic director at the University of Denver, said the 25-man group reached tentative agreement on barring the practice and placing it in the personal foul category.

General Use
"The use of the protective face mask is becoming quite general," Wieman said after the closed meeting, "and the practice of players grabbing opponents by the masks is also becoming all too common."

"Such a procedure is not a part of football," Wieman continued. "It can't be an accident and the feeling of the committee is to cut down on this type of thing before it leads to worse conditions."

Should the move be approved by the committee's 11 voting members at tomorrow's final session, the practice will be outlawed and a 15-yard penalty imposed for a personal foul against the player guilty of mask-grabbing.

Studies showed that defensive players are the worse offenders, Wieman said, and the most frequent target is the pass-catching end.

The question of sideline administration again came under considerable discussion, Wieman said, since there have been many complaints about too many people on the sidelines.

Plan Appeal
Wieman said the problem was not within the jurisdiction of the committee, but an appeal would be made to conference commissioners and the Football Coaches Assn. to take whatever action necessary to curb unauthorized people on the sidelines.

Stock Market Declines Second Day

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP)—The stock market declined sharply today for the second session running.

Steels once again were under selling pressure. Motors and other metal shares were battered down.

Rubbers recovered late in the day and posted some gains as did selected issues in other divisions.

Generally, the range of losses ran from fractions to around 2 points.

Our Horoscope Today

By FRANCIS DRAKE

FOR WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 16, 1957

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—As the day develops, watch for new opportunities to advance. The alert, hard-working individual will make progress. Profit from the valuable experiences of others. Maintain a calm, judicious demeanor.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus)—Swing along with a jaunty yet dignified air and impress those whom you should. You'll be judged by your actions, as well as words. Strive to eliminate unimportant and trivialities from your routine.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini)—Do this day justice if you wish the material. Effective speech and coherent ideas will help. Promote interest in your plans, then pursue them to a successful conclusion. Avoid worry.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—A good day to wind up incomplete matters, tackle neglected correspondence. Prepare to undertake with dispatch matters that demand YOUR attention. Watch diet, health.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—A day for business, employment interests. A personal of family problems. Live within your means. Avoid carelessness.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Careful management will net results. Get essential work accomplished first so that time will be available for such relaxing, pursuits as art, hobbies, recreation.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Avoid unnecessary fuss to better accomplish the day's "MISSIONS." Have faith in your ability and the substantial goals you've set for yourself. Make plans that are practical, feasible.

October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio)—Don't look for extraordinary success. Appreciate small improvement continually. Rome wasn't built in a day.

neither are goals achieved that fast. Smile, maintain a steady, alert attitude.

November 24 to December 23 (Sagittarius)—If work or a problem facing you is difficult, analyze it calmly, study the details carefully and proceed toward solution without anxiety. It may take longer than cutting corners, but results will be worthwhile.

December 24 to January 20 (Capricorn)—As in the case of Scorpio, achievement may not be instantaneous, but the measure of your effort will determine the extent of your gain. Don't drive yourself to the straining point, however.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius)—Bring into play some untapped talent that will enhance your performance. The element of surprise is most effective. Evaluate what your position demands.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces)—Investigate carefully before engaging in new ventures or making investments. Remember that you don't get things for nothing. Be mindful of daily requirements and needs.

YOU BORN TODAY? Your vitality and astuteness, if properly directed, can lead the way to a successful day in the field of your choosing. Generally, you have a flair for organization and a keen eye for a sense of responsibility which would be an asset in a managerial or executive position. You are prudent, conservative when necessary, and, if true to your best traits, able to attain an enviable spot in this ever-changing world. Don't abuse your power or become enmeshed in unhappy situations needlessly. Do not let disappointments dampen your enthusiasm.

Bangor High Opens New Cafeteria
BANGOR—Monday marked opening day for the new cafeteria at the Bangor Area Joint High School. Two hundred and 86 students and 14 teachers took advantage of the first day.

No change has been affected in the school time, and none is anticipated for the balance of the current term as far as the cafeteria and its operation is concerned. Students will still be granted one hour for the noon lunch period. However, with the opening of the 1957-58 school term the lunch period will be cut to 25 minutes and all the students of the school will either purchase their meals in school or carry lunches.

Price
Lunch is served to students for 30 cents a day and to faculty members at 40 cents a day.

Mrs. Marion Strunk, Mrs. Edythe Edwards, Mrs. Winifred Kauffman and Mrs. Marie Schankel are the cooks. They are currently being supervised in their work by Mrs. Lois Hahn, of Easton, a certified state dietitian.

East Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church To Hold Annual Congregational Meeting Today

ANNUAL congregational meeting of the First Presbyterian Church of East Stroudsburg will be held today at the church between 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Rev. Frank W. Wingerter, pastor of the congregation, will moderate the assembly. Albert Sommer, clerk of the session, will assist the moderator in the procedures of the night.

The Board of Elders has recommended to the meeting for action the increase of their body. They desire to increase their board from nine to 12 members.

First Time
For the first time in the history of the church women have been nominated to the highest office of the church. Mrs. Charles Schaller has been named to succeed the late Elder, George Woolbaugh, and Miss Ruth Flory has been nominated to the elder's class of 1957.

Other members who have been put up for eldership are Ralph Burrows, Dr. W. R. Erickson, Jesse R. S. Flory, Ashton L. Burrows and Herbert Rupprecht.

The congregation will also decide upon how much money they will allot for benevolent causes in the ensuing year. Last year they contributed over $5,500 for causes outside of the local church.

Edwin B. Hughes, president of the trustees; Robert Wright, Fred Wyckoff and Fred Gardner, Hughes' associates on the board, will report the status of the property as well as the financial standing of the congregation.
